Message fom the Director

Hello everyone, and hopefully you are enjoying a nice (and warm) start of the semester!

Yes, it is week 3 of the fall semester and the International Education Newsletter is re-starting its regular bimonthly appearance. In this Newsletter you will find announcements for international events occurring on our campus, in the community, and at neighboring universities. You will also find opportunities for scholarships, fellowships and grants available for both students and faculty members. Finally, I would also encourage you to regularly check the website of the Clark Center for International Education as well as our Clark Center Facebook page to keep up with the latest international events on our campus.

I am looking forward to seeing you at the international events on campus and I wish you a great semester!

Best regards,
Alexandru Balas
Director, Clark Center for International Education

International Events at SUNY Cortland

"Digging through the Rubble for a Usable Past: German Reconstructions after 1945"

Lecture by Dr. Scott Moranda, Associate Professor, Department of History, SUNY Cortland

Part of the "Rubble Films: Classics of Post-1945 European Cinema - A Year Long Series"

Sponsored by: The Project on Eastern & Central Europe, the Dowd Fine Arts Gallery, the Department of History, and the Department of Political Science

Professor Moranda's lecture will deal with the post-1945 reconstruction of a German sense of history: from the Rubble forward.

Wed., Sept. 10 @ 4:30pm
Dowd Gallery

Keeping Things Whole – Art Exhibit & Talk by Artist Dowd Fine Art Gallery

Tue., Sept. 16 @ 5pm, Dowd Gallery

Lecture by: Fawn Krieger, NYC-based artist

Sponsored by: The Project on Eastern & Central Europe, the Dowd Fine Arts Gallery, the Department of History, and the Department of Political Science

An exhibit of work by Fawn Krieger, a well-known New York artist is on display in the Down Gallery from Aug. 26 to October 10th. One topic in this exhibition of her work is the "rubble display", that is, the theme of the rubble that confronted Germany and Germans in 1945 after the guns of War fell silent. This section of the exhibition deals with the rubble mountain and displays photographs, video of performance art based on the rubble, pieces of actual rubble, a documentary video of rubble women discussing their experiences.

Globalization101: Internationalizing the Curriculum @ SUNY Cortland

Globalization101.org (http://www.globalization101.org/), a project of SUNY Levin Institute, is a website dedicated to providing secondary-level and college students and their teachers with information and interdisciplinary learning opportunities on the complex phenomenon known as globalization. g101, as it is known, provides up-to-date news analyses, in-depth summary investigations of global issues, expert videos, and teaching tools/lesson plans on a wide variety of topics related to internationalization and globalization. The latter are promoted by the SUNY Global Workforce Project (GWP), which this fall launches an initiative for teacher education.

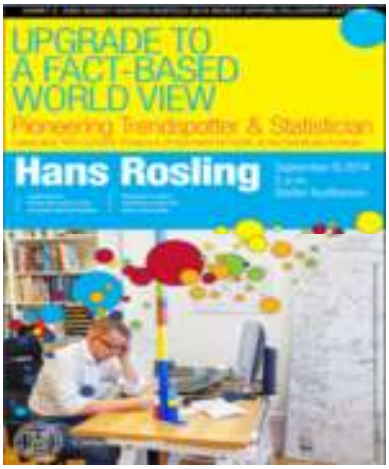

Global Workforce Project: Teaching Resources for Instructors @ SUNY Cortland

Teaching modules and resources on the SUNY Global Workforce Project site are appropriate for secondary social studies and college-level classes. Their content and general design was developed by university faculty with expertise, and modifications added additional activities and strategies for the classroom.
There are ten six-hour modules: Trade, Sustainability, Culture and Human Rights, Gender, Banking and Finance, Technology, Nationalism and State Sovereignty, Health, Demographics, and Global Services. Modules include topics such as Culture and Human Rights, Global Health, Sustainability, Trade, Gender and Globalization, Global Finance and Banking, Nationalism and State Sovereignty.
